

About the Authors

L. NYENTY ARREY is an Assistant Professor of Chemistry and Director of the Summer Institute in Science and Mathematics at Capital University, Columbus, Ohio. He has also served on the faculty of the Denison University Chemistry Department. His Ph.D. is in Organic Chemistry from The Ohio State University. Dr. Arrey's research interests include: (1) Chemical Education – Organic Chemistry and Methods of Learning and Teaching, (2) Synthesis, Characterization, Computational, and Reactivity of heterocyclic Carbene, Diazirine and Nitrene molecules. He is a member of the North American Association of Summer Sessions (NAASS).

ERIN BAILEY DEV is the Director of Summer Sessions for Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon. She is responsible for managing the summer undergraduate program at the college. Under Ms. Dev's leadership, Summer Session revenue at Lewis & Clark has more than doubled and the cost structure has been reduced. She holds a BA in history from Lewis & Clark and a Masters in Education from Columbia University. Prior to assuming her current position, Ms. Dev was an Educator-in-Residence at the Center for Social Innovation at Stanford University and a Research Associate for Post-Graduate Program Development at Teacher's College, Columbia University.

BARBARA GOTSHALL has been the summer session director at Colorado State University (CSU), Ft. Collins, for thirteen years. She received a Masters of Art degree (1982) in Applied Behavioral Science at Wright State University. An active member of NAASS during her tenure at CSU, Barbara currently serves as Treasurer and Chair of the Finance Committee. She has also chaired the Creative and Innovative Award Committee for NAASS, and has presented several times at NAASS conferences. She is also a member of the North Central Conference on Summer Schools (NCCSS) and the Western Association of Summer Session Administrators (WASSA). With her leadership, Colorado State University's summer program has received three exemplary awards from NAASS and an exemplary award from WASSA.

•• About the Authors ••

EUNSOOK HYUN is an Associate Professor in the Department of Teaching, Leadership, and Curriculum Studies at Kent State University, Ohio. She earned her Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction from Penn State University. Dr. E. Hyun's areas of scholarship include teacher education for Developmentally and Culturally Appropriate Practice (DCAP), critical pedagogy, curriculum theorizing, gender studies, bilingual education, higher education curriculum, and minority faculty recruitment and retention.

THOMAS KOWALIK is director of Continuing Education and Outreach at Binghamton University (State University of New York). He earned his Ed.D. in Adult Education at Syracuse University. In his current position, Dr. Kowalik oversees policy, programmatic and fiscal management in the areas of summer and winter sessions, continuing education, and advising. He is a member of NAASS, past president of the University Continuing Education Association, and a founding member of the Alliance for Manufacturing Competitiveness. His extensive experience and research in many facets of higher education has led to applications in various aspects of adult education, instructional systems and design, leadership, strategic planning, oral communications, innovation, and creative problem solving.

MARK KRETOVICS is an Assistant Professor of Higher Education Administration and Student Personnel at Kent State University, Ohio. He is currently the coordinator of the master's degree in Higher Education at Kent State's Graduate School and College of Education. He earned his Ph.D. at Colorado State University. Dr. Kretovics' research interests include the application of business strategies within higher education institutions, organizational politics, outcomes assessment, distance education, and compressed course teaching.

DAVID SCHEJBAL is the founding editor of SUMMER ACADEME and is associate vice chancellor and director of the Office of Continuing Education at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Within his portfolio are off-campus credit courses and programs, conferences and institutes, Robert Allerton Park and Conference Center, and programs in Chicago. In Chicago, Dr. Schejbal has overseen the development of an array of adult-oriented and corporate-facing programs to help expand the resources of the Urbana campus into the Chicago area, with an emphasis on environmentally-related areas. Most recently he has been working on a professional development program in sustainable architecture and sustainable design. Schejbal holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Connecticut, and his research interests include a focus on the evolving relationships between people and nature.