

About the Authors

LUCAS NYENTY ARREY is an Associate Professor of Chemistry and past director of Summer Institute in Science and Mathematics at Capital University from 2002-2008. He is an author of three transformational learning tools in organic chemistry: Organic Chemistry Laboratory Techniques (Microscale), second edition published in 2009; Organic Chemistry: Lecture Notes, with CD “The Absolute, Ultimate Guide on How to be Successful in Organic Chemistry,” second edition, published in 2009; and Interactive Audio Lecture in Organic Chemistry, published 2009. He has also served on the faculty of the Denison University Chemistry Department. His Ph.D. is in Organic Chemistry from The Ohio State University. His research interests are: (1) Chemical education—organic chemistry and methods of learning and teaching, and (2) synthesis, characterization, computational, and reactivity of heterocyclic Carbene, Diazirine, and Nitrene molecules. He is a member of the North American Association of Summer Sessions.

KATHLEEN BARTZEN CULVER currently serves on the faculty of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She joined the University in 1999 to help launch an innovative converged curriculum to prepare students for a changing media landscape. Her broad variety of academic experience and training includes a doctorate in mass communication with an emphasis in media law. She specializes in law, ethics, and digital media, especially social networks online.

DONNA M. FISH, is a consultant to a variety of higher education, non-profit, and corporate organizations. She has also served as Dean of the

••About the Authors••

School of Liberal Arts at Excelsior College, Associate Dean for Strategic and Long-Range Planning at Syracuse University College of Law, and Associate Provost for Enrollment and Curriculum Management at the State University of New York at Cortland. She holds an A.A. from Jefferson Community College, a B.A. in sociology from St. Lawrence University, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in organizational sociology from Cornell University.

ANNE K. HEINZ is Dean of Continuing Education and Professional Studies and Associate Vice Chancellor for Summer Session at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Her interests include lifelong and international learning and administration, particularly within the context of a research university.

BILL J. KOPS is a professor in the Division of Extended Education, and director of Summer Session and General Studies at The University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, Canada. Bill teaches in the area of adult and continuing education in both the Division and the College of Education. His research interests include continuing professional education, summer sessions, older adults and lifelong learning, and self-directed learning.

THOMAS KOWALIK is director of Continuing Education and Outreach at Binghamton University (State University of New York). He earned his Ed.D. in Adult Education at Syracuse University. In his current position, Dr. Kowalik oversees policy, programmatic and fiscal management in the areas of summer and winter sessions, continuing education, and advising. He is a member of NAASS, past president of the University Continuing Education Association, and a founding member of the Alliance for Manufacturing Competitiveness. His extensive experience and research in many facets of higher education has led to applications in various aspects of adult education, instructional systems and design, leadership, strategic planning, oral communications, innovation, and creative problem solving.

ALCINDA C. LEWIS is a biologist and adjunct instructor in continuing education and professional studies at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Her interests include innovative science teaching, recruitment and retention of adult learners, lifelong learning, and informal science education.

••About the Authors ••

HOWARD MARTIN is the former dean of the Division of Continuing Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He retired from that post in 2007 and continues to be a leading authority on summer session administration and pedagogy.

DAVID SCHEJBAL is the founding editor of Summer Academe and is Dean of Continuing Education, Outreach, and E-Learning at the University of Wisconsin-Extension, Madison, Wisconsin. Schejbal holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Connecticut, and his research interests include a focus on the evolving relationships between people and nature.